

Online Meeting Resources Recommendations

Many companies provide resources for enhancing virtual meetings. However, when looking for that tool to collaborate with meeting attendees or to share the visual portion of a message we've put together a short list of virtual meeting resources:

Webex - <http://www.webex.com/> - is a leading provider of on-line meeting and collaboration services. Since Webex does not require downloading of large files of software it easy to access for those who travel often. Pricing options range from 33-cents per minute, to a fixed monthly fee per user (roughly $75 per person per month for unlimited access packages).

Fuze Meeting - <http://www.fuzemeeting.com/> - has been designed for the more tech/social networking savvy users. It easily imports from Facebook, Twitter, Google Talk, Windows Live, Yahoo and Linked-In. In addition, it allows users to pay as you go by the minute or the month. Monthly plans starting at $29.

GotoMeeting - <http://www.gotomeeting.com/fec/> - has become the go to resource for on-line and on-demand collaboration services. It is easy to register as a user and host meetings immediately without the need for training. GotoMeeting does require that you install software on your computer. In addition to ease of use, its low cost, either a monthly subscription fee of $49/month or $468/year, makes this resource the #1 choice for experts in the field.

Adobe also has a few options:

ConnectNow - <http://www.adobe.com/acom/connectnow/> - is a free and extremely simple web conferencing site that operates in your browser. Adobe designed it to be basic and painfully simple. It succeeds excellently!

ConnectPro - <http://www.adobe.com/products/acrobatconnectpro/> - If you are looking for a more complete Web Conferencing solution, Adobe's ConnectPro version has combined its multimedia features to allow businesses and individuals the ability to present, demonstrate, teach, train and collaborate in a secure, real-time virtual environment.
